But, why the backslash are written inside the FROM statement in the first place? Is there any rule or is it just a funny question? A: Backslashes are used for escaping reserved words, delimiters, and identifiers. If a reserved word, delimiter, or identifier is the first word of a MySQL statement, it must be escaped with a backslash to be interpreted correctly. For example, the following statement: SELECT * FROM `user` Would result in a parse error if you did not escape the name `user`. This is because MySQL interprets `user` as the special word for the database user (in addition to its literal interpretation). The manual has a table of reserved words. Abstract This study of the management of the church collection, the liturgical and organisational changes brought in by Napoleon III, and the subsequent political, social, and economic changes in France, aims to set the collection within the wider context of the administration of the Church in France in the second half of the nineteenth century. For the first time the Napoleonic decentralised structure of the collection is revealed, the documents and records showing that a number of archivists were in post at various times. The campaigns by the Church to collect and publish all the documents relating to the collection are detailed. The result is zatoichi 1080p mkv to 1080pgolkes downloadShare this: More than 500 U.S. service members and their families descended on the Reagan National Convention Center in Washington, D.C., this week to celebrate Veterans Day. The U.S. Army Combined Arms Support Command, part of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, awarded 26 Army National Guard Soldiers the Edward "Ned" R. "Pete" Gilligan Valor Award. Each recipient received a custom-made sword and shield. Military Times' Zachary F. Hastings explained that Gilligan died of a heart attack in 2008 while he was on base. "Gilligan was stationed at Fort Belvoir, Va., when he died," Hastings wrote on Oct. 1. "He had earned a bronze star for his leadership during his deployment to Iraq in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom in 2003. He had also earned a silver star for his service in World War I. Gilligan died days before he was to graduate from the National War College." Gilligan is the first enlisted man in Army history to be awarded the Medal of Honor posthumously for actions during a period of war. A native of San Juan, Puerto Rico, Gilligan joined the Army in February of 1944 and was sent to China. He was promoted to sergeant and then awarded the Bronze Star for gallantry in combat for actions during a three-month stint on a Navy Armed Transport ship. Fourteen of Gilligan's Army buddies received the Medal of Honor for similar actions in Vietnam during the late 1960s and early 1970s, according to Military Times. The 3rd Infantry Division held the gala event to honor the service of every branch of the U.S. Armed Forces and to celebrate the contributions that veterans have made to the country, he said. "This is our way of saying thank you," said Col. Douglas W. Johnson, the Combined Arms Support Command commander. The 3rd Infantry Division's overall command sergeant major, Sgt. Maj. Robert J. Heffron, said that the commander presented the medal and awards during the banquet, which included speeches by Army leaders and pipers from the 87th Infantry Regiment. The commemoration of Gilligan's memory led to the unveiling of a monument honoring those who've fought for the
